Introduction

Reading skill- due to its very special position in academic, social, and political settings- has always been of considerable significance throughout the history of TEFL.

The present book has been designed with a more functional view to the teaching of reading comprehension. On the one hand, the texts have been chosen according to the taste and interests of university freshmen. On the other hand, the preparation of exercises has been based on the material presented in the texts, not according to a presupposed structuralist attitude on language. Moreover, exercises having been based on the material presented throughout texts, provides the opportunity for reviewing them in new contexts. This leads to the very reinforcement of learning. All the exercises have been prepared in a way that doing them has the students make references to the reading passage, too. This would indirectly make up for a common obstacle in teaching reading skill, i.e. the reluctance of readers to review the reading passages again.

At the end of each chapter, some proverbs in accordance with the topic of passages are presented, which would bring variety to the mood of the class.

The book includes 12 chapters, and the exercises exhibit an identical rhythm of task and presentation throughout the book. It has been purposefully written for instructing reading skill to university students in bachelors level.

Preparing a book for this level is a complicated task. However, the author has done her best to make this textbook as useful as possible. Anyhow, the constructive suggestions of knowledgeable and experienced professors and colleagues would definitely pave the way for future revision. Leila Vahid Azari
