Preface

Globalization is the process of designing and developing a software product that functions in multiple cultures/locales. This process involves: Identifying the culture/locale that must be supported, Designing features which support those cultures/locales and writing code that functions equally well in any of the supported cultures/locales. Localization is the process of adapting a globalized application, which you have already processed for localizability, to a particular culture/locale. The process of localizing your application also requires a basic understanding of relevant character sets commonly used in modern software development and an understanding of the issues associated with them. The aim of this analysis is to demonstrate peaking skills of scholars learning English. Analysis suggests that the integrated use of recent techniques such as mobile applications will yield positive results and result in the advance of communicative ability. Learning English by using new ways in education and traveling and dealing abroad encourages students to find out the language, develops their ability to talk fluently, and helps them overcome the roadblock.

Change within the learning atmosphere is that the results of developments within the data and communication technologies. Mobile learning system will deliver education to learners anytime and anyplace they have it. M-learning is limitless in terms of the content and geographical extent, so, this offers spread virtual lecture rooms accessible any time. The projected analysis can offer associate in-depth survey and analysis of the aforesaid work taking into thought the updated trendy technologies.
