Introduction

This book is a revised edition of the book I published almost 11 years ago when I was a PhD student at University of Tehran. When I established my own publication house, I decided to republish it with the permission of Koye Kosar. I have worked with Latin and Greek roots in this book. For example, "sepet" in Latin means "to look". Almost 20 words of the English language are based on that particular root. Examples include but are not limited to "spectacular", "spectrum", "inspector", "spectacles", "retrospect", "introspect", respect", "suspect", "prospective".

The book is based on alphabetical orders. The roots are explained and then popular examples are given. At the end of each letter group of words, come vocabulary tests from efferent books that are related to the particular words explained. The book is useful for AOEFL candidates and all those people who are interested in delving descent to the English language. All comments may be addressed to me at sale hi78 (a) alto com.
